

The "Tone Police!"

#DiversityInSocialIntelligence
#TheDoubleEmpathyProblem
#AutsticMasking

Autistic or Neurodivergent Social Differences

Points out facts

Points out more facts

Points out irony

Points out and corrects inaccuracy

Direct and forthright statements

Monotropic

Rule follower who points out rules

Honest and frank

Clarifies the truth in half-truths, lies

Champions right, moral, ethical, justice without compromise

Dichotomous thinking, especially where human rights (and ABA) are concerned

Heightened sense of justice

Ableism running rampant

Hyper-awareness of a social order

Strokes egos

Uses soft language that can be explained away

Hierarchical ranking of relationships

Group perception is the priority, so moderates perceptions and others' emotions

Sets the group communication expectations through "othering"

Pathologizes diversity in expression

Shaming used to reign in diversity in social intelligence: "Rude". "Blunt". "Unkind".

"Militant". "Dictating". "Controlling".

Resources:

Lived experiences

Why are autistic people generally more blunt and forthright than their neurotypical counterparts?
<https://www.quora.com/Why-are-autistic-people-generally-more-blunt-and-forthright-than-their-neurotypical-counterparts>

'Blunt and frank': Embracing my Autistic identity - Reframing Autism

<https://www.reframingautism.org.au/blunt-and-frank-embracing-my-autistic-identity/>