Our Hotlinking Policy

What is a hotlink? It is the practice of placing a link on your own website directly to our free printable documents. Here are Therapist Neurodiversity Collective's policies on hotlinking:

You are not permitted to hotlink to any content on therapistndc.org without fully citing our work and making it clear to visitors on your website that it is not your own original work.

You are not permitted to download our free printables and then upload them to your own website at any time (with a download link directly on your website).

You are not permitted to capture images of our free educational printables and post them on your own website. If you are using our images in a NOT FOR PROFIT endeavor, such as in an educational blog or article, you must obtain our permission in writing and, the image must be fully credited as shown below and linked to therapistndc.org.

Listing Therapist Neurodiversity Collective as a recommended "Resource" on your website, and then linking directly to our Home Page or the Education Page is fine.

Posting links to our printable pdfs for public educational purposes only:

Your hotlink must include a full citation on your website's link page, making it clear to your site visitors that the free printable is not your original work. Furthermore, you may not link your website directly to our website in any manner that leads visitors to be under the impression (directly or implied) that therapistndc.org is part of your own website.

Example of how to properly cite a link to one of our free printables: Title of the Free Printable, 2021, Therapist Neurodiversity Collective, accessed 1 October 2021, <<https://therapistndc.org/>>

You are not permitted to place hotlinks from your website directly to Therapist Neurodiversity Collective's links to free educational printables for use in any of your for-profit endeavors.

This includes using our free materials as a way to advertise your for-profit business or therapy practice or parent coaching business, etc. This includes posting links or copies of our free materials that are only accessible behind a paywall, or only available to members in membership plan, etc.) You are not permitted to download and use our free content in any for-profit endeavor, where a person must pay you to access our free printables

Appropriating free neurodiversity education materials meant for advocacy education and exploiting them in for-profit endeavors is the appropriation of a human rights movement for financial gain.

Violations will be addressed.

Quotations from Therapistndc.org

You may quote a maximum of 150 words in total (that is, from the entire website and not per article) from Therapistndc.org. You must cite the source of this quote, inclusive of the domain name of origin.

Re: Free Publicly Available Materials on therapistndc.org/education

You may download and print the free educational materials for personal and professional use. Professionals may print and provide the materials to clients but are not permitted to provide these materials for any additional commercial gain. In other words, professionals may use these materials as part of their work but must not add additional charge to clients for their use or provision.

Conditions: These materials must be given without charge and you are not permitted to redistribute these materials in any format except printed hard copy.

You are not permitted to remove the Therapist Neurodiversity Collective logo, the copyright notice or the Therapist Neurodiversity Collective copyright at the bottom of each page.

Example: You are a therapist or teacher in a school and you give a hard copy of our printable to a colleague or a parent. You may download the printable, print it out and hand it to another person to use in their place of employment or home. You are not allowed to download our printables and sell them to another person for any reason.

Unacceptable practices:

- Misrepresenting Therapist Neurodiversity Collective's free printables as your original work.
- Formal Collective members misrepresenting any of the members' only content as your original work.
- Hotlinking the public free printables on Therapistndc.org directly to your website without following the citation policies as stated above, and making it clear to visitors that the work is not your own original content.
- Downloading a Therapistndc.org printable and placing onto your website for direct download on your website.
- Accepting any form of payment by an institution, professional, or parent for their use. These free materials are to educate the public about the Neurodiversity Movement (a human rights movement) and not for your monetary gain.

Permissible:

- Download our free printables from the Therapistndc.org website for your own personal use without commercial intent.
- Link to a webpage from our website to your website on the condition that you adhere to the citation rules stated above, and clearly make known that the printable, or content is not your original work.
- Redistribute the free materials through printed hard copy. However, the materials must not be modified or have the Therapistndc.org copyright notice removed.
